

A Commuters Obsession

James had a happy life with a great partner, until an obsession with a gorgeous man he meets on the train makes him question his sanity. He is instantly smitten by the stranger, whom he first sees in the train on his way to work. James becomes consumed by thoughts of this man, even distracting him from work. When they get to sit together repeatedly on the commute, they begin to have short conversations and find out more about each other. James is disappointed to discover that this man, Steven Ross, has a girlfriend. Chats on the train eventually turn into an invitation for coffee, and that's when Steve breaks some big news: he has just broken up with his girl and he thinks he might be gay! Things are looking up for James... except he wakes on the train and realizes he was dreaming. But the man beside him is still Steve, the Adonis of his fantasies. What is real? What is not? Where is the line between? Is he losing his mind? If it was all a dream, can he make it into reality? James follows the gorgeous man, determined to find out...

SAMPLE: At last, the three of us were laying on our king sized bed. We placed Steve between us, and began an oral exploration of every part of his body. His fully erect cock was about seven inches, and average size around. He was uncut. My restraint gave out and I pounced on his cock. Doug began to sensuously rim the eager boy. While Doug continued his rimming, I jumped up, greased my ass and Steve's cock, and began to sit down on him. When he was in my ass to the hilt, I couldn't help but notice that I felt no pain, just like in my dream. When Steve came gushing up my ass, I wanted to suck the rest of his stuff out of him. But as I pulled away, everything went black. In the darkness, I could hear Doug yelling at me to please stay awake...
