

Racial Factors in Democracy (Classic Reprint)

A live, I, i fear that some of my readers will find it difficult to believe so. If some of my remarks about our present-day civilization are found to be somewhat acrimonious, I beg the indignant critic to attribute their quality not to malice aforethought on my part, but rather to the very lively realization which I have of the fact that we are still far less civilized and enlightened than we are destined one day to be. Let all men and women who love the beauty and the goodness which the world contains, and who hate the ugliness and evil which, all too frequently, we see about us, strive, now and ever, to do their utmost to increase that which they love and to demolish that which they loathe. To encourage such a course of adlion is the chief motive underlying the pages which follow. Philip Ainsworth Means 196 Beacon Street Boston, Massachusetts, U. S. A.
