

The Problem of Americanization (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Problem of Americanization The word Americanization has become a household term - among the native-born a synonym of anxiety, dread, or duty, among the foreign-born one of misgiving, suspicion, or hope. There are more than five million aliens in the United States, ninety-five percent of whom are kindly disposed to America. The remaining five percent comprise the radicals, whose souls are lashed by breezes of doctrines, emanating from continental Europe, writhing in the hand of doctrinaires who treat a starving and bankrupt patient. The radicals have a well-organized speakers bureau, a many-tongued press, and a fervency in attack which cannot be paralleled by any constructive and conserving agency interested in aliens. If Bolshevism and I. W. W.-ism are to be successfully combated, America needs a program of enlightenment, an army of volunteer workers, a wide-awake press, and a zeal for American democracy akin to apostolic fervor. The radicals have long had the right of way in communities made up of foreign-speaking peoples. We should match this with a propaganda of enlightenment as to what the principles of American democracy are, how it operates, and what the prospects are for a successful future.
