

A Diary in America, Vol. 2 of 3: With Remarks on Its Institutions (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from A Diary in America, Vol. 2 of 3: With Remarks on Its Institutions
The women of America are unquestionably, physically, as far as beauty is concerned, and morally, of a higher standard than the men; nevertheless they have not that influence which they ought to possess. In my former remarks upon the women of America I have said, that they are the prettiest in the world, and I have put the word prettiest in italics, as I considered it a term peculiarly appropriate to the American women. In many points the Americans have, to a certain degree, arrived at that equality which they profess to covet; and in no one, perhaps, more than in the fair distribution of good looks among the women.
