

The Road to Nowhere: from the author of Follow the Dove and The Broken Horizon (Raumsey series Book 3)

On the long journey from their home in the northern isles of Scotland, Isa and Davie meet up with Sarah, a young girl from the Irish community in Liverpool, who has been sent to Canada to marry a man twice her age whom she has never met. Through the years, both Sarah and Isa grow into strong independent women. The struggle to build a better life in this new, often harsh land is intercepted and exacerbated by the great war, which brings tragedy to some, yet gives Sarah the means of escape from what she sees as the nothingness of her existence. Left alone during the war years, Isa is faced with extra trials that she could have never foreseen. Tragedy of the past and challenges of the present threaten to overwhelm her, yet she confronts every setback with her normal strength of spirit and unending optimism. Then she receives a letter which has the potential to change her life... from FB Irene Mackay; Just finished reading this book, another good read. Looking forward to the next one. Unlike Reply Message 1 21 January at 22:54 Marjory Mackinnon; just finished this book, was well written and an interesting story, only down side , it wasnt long enough, hurry up with another one please xx Kate Hollins 6 January Tracy Sinclair, your mums books are now doing the rounds with the teachers at BISS in Shanghai. Feedback is how hard they are to put down. Friends that do read them please use FB to let others know what a great read this trilogy is. Janice Morrison; I have read them all - really enjoyed them. Thank you Catherine X Like Reply Message 31 March at 12:43 Amy Weatherstone McNair; Got them at a craft fair at PPP and just finished the first one, really enjoyed it and cant wait to read the rest.
