

The Legend of Jimmy Camp

Jimmy Camp is the name of an historic campground on the eastern edge of Colorado Springs. Legend has it that the campground was named for an Indian trader named Jimmy. Once a year during the 1830s, Jimmy was said to have brought his wagons to this beautiful valley in the shadow of Pikes Peak. On each arrival he built a large fire atop a nearby hill as a signal to the local tribesmen that the yearly trade was about to begin. During his last visit, however, he had barely built his fire before a party of Mexicans pounced upon him, murdered him, and carried off his entire supply of trade goods. Jimmy's Indian friends came into camp soon after. Finding only Jimmy's body, they pursued the Mexicans, and overtaking them avenged his death by hanging the assassins by their toes from the limbs of trees.
