

Rustic life in France.

Excerpt from Rustic Life in France Vergil said, O too liapp husbandmen, if they but knew their own blessings! ... And at the end of the second book of the Georgics, in fine, musical, vivid verses, he enumerates the joys of rustic life. But Vergil wrote under the inspiration of M?cenas; and the minister of Augustus desired, it is claimed, by the aid of this official poem in honor of agriculture, to arouse among the Romans a taste for laboring in the fields. Another poem, the Moretum attributed also to the singer of the Georgics, gives a more exact description, a more real picture, of the rude life of the Latin peasant. The key-note of the Moretum is the truth. I have found it again among our own people, in a popular Breton song: -About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
