

The Political Campaigns of Colorado: With Complete Tabulated Statements of the Official Vote (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Political Campaigns of Colorado: With Complete Tabulated Statements of the Official Vote It has been the intention, in compiling this little work, while keeping as closely as possible to the occurrences having an influence upon the state campaigns, in their chronological order, to omit all details and incidents which, while interesting in themselves, were not so closely connected with final results as to render than necessary to a proper understanding of the work. It will possibly be suggested to the reader that while the details of the Democratic conventions have been slighted, an undue prominence has been given to Arapahoe county. This is in strict accordance with the object of the work and the method of construction adopted. As a rule the only acts of Democratic conventions which have had an influence upon the results of a campaign have been their nominations. Being the minority party, no internal arrangement, party rule or policy, or method of party government, could ordinarily affect the general result. Political history is made by the dominant party. But when the acts of the Democratic, or of -any other party have affected the campaign, they have been given clue prominence, with all the necessary attention to detail.
