

Addresses of U. M. Rose: With a Brief Memoir (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Addresses of U. M. Rose: With a Brief Memoir

Requested to write an account of his ancestry and youth, Judge Rose wrote the following: My father was Dr. Joseph Rose, son of Charles Rose. Joseph Rose was born near Petersburg, Va. While he was a child the family removed to Western Pennsylvania, where Charles Rose purchased a farm. His son, Joseph Rose, received a fairly good education in the local schools, and on his approach to manhood he was sent to Philadelphia, where he entered upon the study of medicine. Having completed his studies, he located in Pittsburgh. His father, Charles Rose, dying about that time, left him a small estate, which led him into a disastrous enterprise that burdened his whole life. He and a few of his friends started a manufactory of glass, then a new industry in this country, at Pittsburgh, which was then but a small town in comparison with what it now is. The venture was signally unfortunate. In a few years the firm failed, and the partners gave their joint note for a large deficit. My earliest recollections are painfully connected with that terrible debt, the skeleton in the family closet. Creditors must have been very indulgent in those early times. About the Publisher
