

The Administration of the British Colonies, Vol. 2 of 2 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Administration of the British Colonies, Vol. 2 of 2 Several friends, who have read, and approve, the opinions and doctrine contained in the following tract, doubt whether the present be the proper time for making them public. Although they think that of the subject had been, at the first outset of this business, taken up on this ground, many difficulties which we are now entangled in, and many of the evils which seem impending over us, might have been avoided; yet - on the matter of the issue to which things are now brought - they doubt whether this, or any other reasoning which holds out a line of Pacification, will have any effect at all, or even be read at this hour.
