

The Prophet and the Maid: The Third Testament

During the early to mid fourteen hundreds there was a battle of epic proportions known as the Hundred Years War. This war took place in France, pitting the British and their Burgundian allies against the French. Nearing the end of this war God chose two people and sent them forth to aid the French cause. The first one he sent was the apostle Peter not just God's prophet but also his sword now known to the French as Jean d'Aulon. The second person God sent was a sainted young virgin known as Jehanne d'Arc. Jean and Jehanne formed a dynamic duo on the battlefield protected by the angel of death. It was love at first sight for both of them. Their union in matrimony continues to this very day. Their physical love forbidden by God was their undoing.
