Not illustrated. 1870 edition. Excerpt: ...the Kings Majesty to be our only sovereign lord, the singular protector of the Church and clergy of England, and as far as is allowed by the law of Christ, also as our Supreme Head. The words were read aloud by the Archbishop, and were received in silence. Do you assent? he asked. The House remained speechless. Whoever is silent seems to consent, the Archbishop said. A voice answered out of the crowd, Then are we all silent. They separated for a few hours to collect themselves. In the afternoon sitting they discussed the sufficiency of the subterfuge; and at length agreeing that it saved their consciences, the clause was finally passed, the Bishop of Rochester, among the rest, giving his unwilling acquiescence. i Memoranda relating to the Clergy: Soils House MS. Burnet, vol. iii. p. 80. So for the present terminated this grave matter. The pardon was immediately submitted to Parliament, where it was embodied in a statute; and this act of dubious justice accomplished, the Convocation was allowed to return to its usual occupations, and continue the prosecutions of the heretics. The House of Commons, during their second session, had confined themselves meanwhile to secular business. They had been concerned chiefly with regulations of 1 The Kings Highness, having always tender eyes with mercy and pity and compassion towards his spiritual subjects, minding of his high goodness and great benignity so always to impart the same unto them, as justice being duly administered, all rigour be excluded; and the great benevolent minds of his eaid subjects having been largely and many times approved towards his Highness, and specially in their Convocation and Synod
