

National Danger in Romanism: Or Religion and the Nation (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from National Danger in Romanism: Or Religion and the Nation
I wish to speak to you this afternoon on Religion and the Nation, and I have chosen three texts from the Holy Scriptures which show their relationship. In Psalms xxxiii. 12 we read, Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord; and the people whom he hath chosen for his inheritance. In Psalms xxii. 28, For the kingdom is the Lords: and he is the governor among the nations. While in Matthew xxviii. 19 our Lord says, Go ye therefore, and teach all nations. The star of Bethlehem is no more the adequate symbol of Christs presence in the world. For one radiant point, shining out into the gloom of night, is not sufficient to indicate the diffused light of his presence who came to be the Sun of righteousness. To-day the fitting type of Christ, in the world, is the radiant sun, as he mounts toward the zenith, illuminating every place and disclosing everything upon the upturned hemisphere. So Christ and Christs truth are not to be directed merely to minute personal affairs, but are to be applied in the largest way to matters of the greatest magnitude.
